good government

“Tom and I worked closely on issues to make sure that the City and the business community experienced mutual gains. He is hardworking, knowledgeable, follows up, and has a passion for good government.”

Tom led the successful fight to reject several poorly sited development projects in slide-prone canyons in the El Sobrante Valley, and closed down a firing range near the Richmond Annex.

Tom Butt is completely independent of special interests. His only objective is to do what is best for the citizens of Richmond.”

— ROSEMARY CORBIN, Mayor 1993-2001

“Over the years, Butt has developed a reputation for being a good government politician and a leading advocate for preserving the Richmond waterfront's unique World War II history.”

— East Bay Express

crime prevention

“Tom understood early on that the issue of violence and crime must be approached as a serious public health problem. He was out in front supporting my efforts to create the Office of Neighborhood Safety. We focused on education, reducing the availability of guns, teaching peaceful conflict resolution, and job-training.

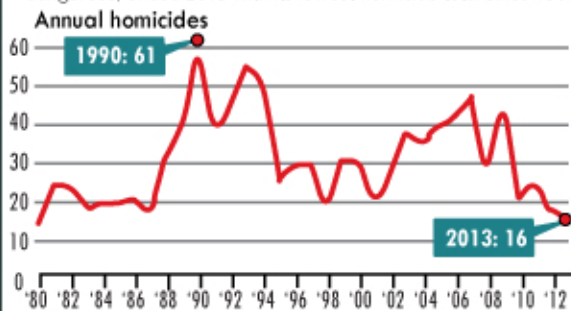

These policies have paid off. Since Tom has been in office, crime in Richmond has plummeted. Homicides and violent crime reached the lowest level in decades.

He has the skill, He does the homework and he has the commitment to see it through.”

— IRMA ANDERSON, Mayor 2001-2006

Richmond's homicide reductions

The city of Richmond, once ranked among the nation's most dangerous, ended 2013 with its lowest homicide total since 1980.

quality of life

“Tom Butt knows that improving quality of life in Richmond is key to attracting and retaining the businesses that bring jobs and create the revenue needed to keep Richmond heading in the right direction.

Businesses and employees are looking to locate in communities that are pursuing sustainable futures and healthy lifestyles, as well as offering amenities, such as Richmond's 32 miles of shoreline and extensive Bay Trail network.

Tom led the effort to bring Richmond into Marin Clean Energy, saving our residents nearly $2 million a year in electricity costs while providing the greenest energy in California.”
